

Deep & Far

It appears correct if one entity needs IP services, it will try best to find out the most competent but the most competitive service provider. This firm would like to take challenges or tests from the clients to be so qualified in the Greater China Area.

For competence verification, it seems straightforward and easy by means of:

- Sending us an existing claim set or OA for our comments how we could improve/prepare new claim set/the claim amendments
- Sending us a pending application without the claims for us to draft the claims for the client's comparison with those of the original claims
- Sending to both the current firm and this firm an initial disclosure, to compare and find out which firm can provide the better claims.

As to competitiveness, we have the following views:

1. Competitiveness is different from cheap
2. Volume discount is reasonable
3. Too much discount is unhealthy for both the client and this firm
4. If instructed to file both in CN & TW, we collect only one translation fee

If you believe we have demonstrated competence and competitiveness, we are prepared for inquiry or further verification at:
